RESEARCH/WRITING

A. In Process

Ongoing research in using improvisational and immersive theatre forms to devise work using source material, story structure, moment work and the viewpoints. The research has resulted in several workshops utilizing the tools of the stage to develop work. Through the above methodologies of theatre I have been investigating the intersection of individual stories, identity and cultural perception:

The Father Project (working title) On-going is a work in progress focusing on perception and performance identity. My focus on source material is inspired by the life of my deceased father, veterans of war and sexual identity.

B. Previous

Bite-Size, An Evening of Microtheatre 2018;
One Act: A fully improvised play 2012; SWEAT: improv on bikes
2013; Normal Heights 2013.

Bite-Size, An Evening of Micro Theater (Creator/Director) Off-Center at The Denver Center Theater Company: creator and director in a sight specific, micro-theatre experience. This was a proposal I submitted to the Denver Center in the Spring of 2017. It was a series of 15 minute plays written by local playwrights inspired by The BookBar. A sight-specific local business in Denver where the event happened.

One Act (Creator/ Director) was a fully improvised one act play with 9 actors. Using the structure of a story, movement and live accompaniment. This show was a success at the Boulder International Fringe Festival and went on to performing a 9 month season at The Dairy Arts Center in Boulder, CO.

SWEAT, Improv on bikes (Actor)

was a piece I pitched to The Denver Center for the Performing Arts and their Off-Center program. Myself, another actor and a musician on a tricked-out musical bike performed a 60min. structured improvisational show on bikes with projections and limited audience participation.

Normal Heights (Creator/ Director) is a musical about a gay man growing up in the 50's and 60's. Inspired by one man's journal this piece was developed using movement, song and improvisation. Myself, the actor and the composer used moment work as a structure for creating work. This piece was a success with rave reviews for The Boulder International Fringe Festival, The Brighton Fringe Festival in England, University of Redlands and The University of Colorado, Boulder
